

Data privacy is about control by the people, not corporations

In the era of data breaches and revolt against some of our largest data holders, it's more important than ever for companies to understand and protect consumer data. There are a million ways to use data for evil, but only a handful ways to use it for good.